

Teaching Activities of the Department

The Department of Veterinary Gynaecology & Obstetrics undertakes several teaching activities to ensure effective learning and skill development among students:

1. Undergraduate courses are regularly revised according to the latest guidelines of the Veterinary Council of India (VCI).
2. Master's and Doctoral curricula are updated to incorporate recent advances in animal reproduction.
3. Practical training is provided in small groups to enhance students' understanding of concepts.
4. Audio-visual aids are used to make teaching more effective and comprehensive.
5. Manuals and other learning materials are made available for easy and effective study.
6. Students receive field exposure through infertility camps to gain practical experience.
7. Modern equipment and diagnostic aids are used for accurate diagnosis of reproductive disorders.
8. Models, charts, and slaughterhouse specimens are utilized to improve understanding of reproductive problems and their solutions.
9. Students are encouraged to retrieve and interpret scientific information from electronic media.
10. Discussions and presentations on recent scientific developments in animal reproduction are organized to improve communication and presentation skills.
